PREFACE.

THE arrangement of this book is simple and hardly needs explanation. From John Gallup of the second generation who married Hannah Lake, there are only two lines, those of his two sons John and Benadam. His son William left no sons, and of Samuel there is no record.

As John was the oldest, his line is given first in order and that of Benadam following through all the generations, being easily understood by the names and figures placed after each individual whose history is given. The small figures denote the generations.

Any descendant may thus readily trace his own line back to John the pioneer settler.

Those only are numbered who bear the name Gallup, and may be found in the first index.

Names of those connected with the family by marriage are in the second index.

The abbreviations are b. born; m. married; d. died; s. p. died without issue.

INTRODUCTION.

"Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children, and their children, another generation.—Joel, 1-3."

In this simple, natural, and best of all ways, there has come to us an incomplete knowledge of that past in which our ancestors lived, well and worthily, their appointed lives.

A reverent love for that time, glorified by the heroic deeds of our fathers, and the fearless devotion of our mothers, has unconsciously become one of our noblest mental possessions, inspiring to zealous search for recorded facts in the life history of those whose lips can no longer tell it to their children.

To verify and keep forever these stories of heroism, familiar from our childhood, and more precious than any written volume, this book has been written, that the children, and children's children may enjoy with us, and keep in memory the gathered harvest of fact, event, and incident, from the different branches of our venerable family tree.

May it intensify our reverence for the strong characters in the beginning of our family history, and more firmly seal the feeling of friendly kinship between those who have not yet attained the ancestral rank.

It was the thought of the author when beginning this work to compile only a brief history of his own branch of the family, but yielding to the solicitation of other branches, he consented to enlarge his plan, and hoped to embrace all of the lineage in the United States. But, finding it impossible to obtain records of all, in justice to those who have so long waited for the appearance of the book, the writer is constrained to suspend his researches and bring the work to completion, after having given it a vast amount of time and labor.

That errors will occur, notwithstanding the greatest care upon the compiler's part to avoid them, will be understood by all, but in no case has there been any liberty taken with dates. They are published as taken from old family Bibles, copies of records supplied by individuals, and from the examination of town and church records.

This introduction would be incomplete without an expression of cordial appreciation for all the valuable help so kindly, freely and wisely given by different individuals from the beginning to the end of the finished work.

Will one and all accept the sincere acknowledgments of the author for the priceless importance of aid received, and the generous and encouraging spirit that always came with it, which, though perfectly understood, can never be completely expressed by the grateful

AUTHOR.

There seem to be two heirs alive in 1623, but one is of North Bowood, and heir of Strode (Thomas, aged 6), and the other (Roger, son and heir, aged 11), from folio 59. The latter is of Bowood only.

The English family is still at Strode.

PEDIGREE.

Visitation of Gollop, of Strode, and Bowood. Taken in the year 1623, by Henry St. George (Richmond Herald), and Sampson Lennard (Blue Mantle Pursuivant), marshalls and deputies to William Campden Clarenceax, King of Arms.

Richmond Herald—A superior officer, "one of the six heralds of the English heralds college," an office created by Henry VII. in memory of his previous title of Earl of Richmond.

Blue Mantle Pursuivant—The title of one of the English pursuivants at arms. The office was created either by Edward III. or by Henry V., and named in allusion to the robes of the Garter, or as some suppose to the colors of the arms of France.

ARMS.

Gules, on a bend; Or, a lion passant; guardant, sable.

Crest, a demi-lion barry, Or, and sable, holding in his dexter paw a broken arrow, gules.

Motto—"Be bolde. Be wyse."

EXPLANATION.

Gules, red, taken from the color in the open mouth of the heraldic lion; bend, or bendy, signifies that the field or escutcheon, is divided by diagonal lines from the dexter chief to the sinister base—in reality a gold band five-eighths of an inch in width. The field represents the shield, which was an important part of knightly armor; the dexter chief, as worn by bearer on right arm, would bring the upper portion of band at right hand. Or (gold), a “lion passant, guardant, sable, simply means a black lion, on a gold band, walking with his face turned toward the observer. Crest reads: “A gold half lion, crossed by black horizontal bars, holding in his right paw a red, broken arrow.”

The lion has always been a favorite emblem for the expression of strength and power, which fact is too well understood, perhaps, to need repetition here. In heraldry it is always understood to be rampant, unless differently expressed.

Armorial insignia consists for the most part of one or more objects called charges, depicted on a field.

One coat of arms differs from another, not by charges only but by difference of color or tincture. In British Heraldry there are nine tinctures, two metals: Or, gold; Argent, silver; two furs, colors five, gules (red), azure (blue), sable (black), vert (green), purpure (purple).

There is always an atmosphere of mystery about these old family escutcheons, which only enhances their interest, and our desire to penetrate their meaning, at best vague and unsatisfactory, and so we never weary of anything bearing upon the subject. For this reason, we give the opinion of one writer upon heraldry, that the full figure of a lion denotes some past connection with a royal family.

If this is true, in our family the connection is so very remote we have no knowledge of it whatever, and no desire to make the slightest claim thereto, though we hold our copy of the “Coat of Arms” as a treasured memento of the family, from that far away time of which we can now learn so little.

LINEAGE.

[From Burke's History of the Landed Gentry.]

GOLLOP OF STRODE AND BOWOOD.

GOLLOP—George Tilly, Esq., of Strode House, County Dorset, born 11th October, 1791, married 19th September, 1815. Christine, daughter of Hubertus Vander Viegen, a gentleman of Hasselt, in the district of Liege, and has issue: George, born 13th August, 1825. John, born 27th May, 1829. Christina, Georgina Jane.

Mr. Gollop succeeded his father, in 1793, and was a magistrate of Dorsetshire.

John Gollop, the founder of this family, was, according to some memoirs preserved in the family, a soldier of fortune from either Denmark or Sweden, who flourished in the reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV.; but other and more probable accounts, coinciding with the visitation in 1623, state that he lived in 1465 and came from the north.

John Gollop, of North Bowood and Temple, living time Henry VIII.; married Joan, daughter of . . . Collins, of Nailscroft, County Dorset, and was succeeded at his decease by his son, Thomas Gollop, who in minority was placed under the guardianship of Sir Giles Strangeways, being then possessed of Strode, North Bowood, and Temple. He married Agnes, daughter of Humphrey Watkins, of Holwell, in Somersetshire, and had issue:

Thomas Gollop, Esq., of North Bowood and Strode, born in 1617. This gentleman was educated at Wadhan College, and at the Middle Temple.

He was Coroner of the County Dorset, and served the office of Sheriff in the twenty-seventh of Charles II., when he was attended by his ten sons as javelin men, headed by their uncle. The deficiency in the usual number being remarked by the Judge, the explanation of the persons who composed the train was given, and an excuse made upon the plea of so large a family.

He married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Thomas Thorne, of Candlemarsh, Gent., and had issue:

1. Thomas, who died s. p. in 1727.
2. Giles, of London, whose line terminated with his grandson, George Gollop, of Chilfron, surgeon.

10. Nicholas, of London.

11. Richard, of Charmouth.

John Gollop, Alderman of Dorchester, succeeded to the family estate by an arrangement with his elder brothers, by which he paid them a sum of money and annuities for life. He married first, Mary, daughter of Philip Stansby, of Dorchester, and secondly, Frances, widow of Henry Backway, Gent. By the former, of whom he had issue to survive in infancy,

John, his heir,

Thomas, of London, merchant, who married Mary, daughter of Walter Foy, Esq., of Bewly Wood.

Rebecca, married Edward Tucker, Esq., of Weymouth.

Mr. Gollop died 25th August, 1731, and was succeeded by his son.

John Gollop, Esq., of Strode, who married first, Edith, daughter of Walter Foy, Esq., of Bewly Wood; second, Penelope, daughter of John Mitchell, Esq., of Kingston Russell, and third, Joan, daughter of Giles Hitt, gentleman of Lorscheb. By the first lady he had issue:

B., vicar of Frampton and Rector of Bettescombe in Dorsetshire, and left at his decease in 1793 an only son, the present George Tilly Gollop, Esq., of Strode.

Sketch of the late George Tilly Gollop of Dorsetshire, England, kindly furnished for this work by his daughter, Mrs. Henry Reeve, of London, England, abridged from his diaries.

In the autobiography of the Hon. Roger North, just published by Dr. Jessop, there is an allusion to an incident on circuit in the west of England: "It happened in Dorsetshire once that the High Sheriff had ten sons who carried halberds and wore his livery, and his eldest son was the captain of the band (27th Charles II., 1670)."

A lineal descendant of that officer will celebrate his 96th birthday on the 11th October.

Mr. Gollop was born in October, 1791; his father died in January, 1793, and the boy then came into possession of the estate of Strode in the parish of Netherbury, acquired by his ancestors the year of the Armada. There are records of the family in an adjoining parish for another century, and it is possible that when the battle of Bosworth Field ended the civil wars, the "Soldier of Fortune," said to be the progenitor of the family, settled in Dorsetshire.

Mr. Gollop's first school was at Mrs. Standard's, in Long street, Sherborne, a sort of dame's school; he went to similar schools at Burton, Bradstock and at White Cross, North Netherbury.

Next to a writing school kept by Mr. Ayres at Sherborne. The old gentleman was a good mathematician, wrote a book on astronomy, and wore a pigtail.

When seven or eight years old he went to a boarding school at Kington Magna, kept by the Rev. W. Toogood, and later on to Dr. Jones, Redland, near Bristol where a prize was awarded him for progress in the fourth class in 1803.

Mr. Gollop was at Brazenose, Oxford in 1808-9, and subsequently became a pupil of Chitty, the well known conveyancer, being entered at the Inner Temple in May, 1811.

But his health was not strong, the close air of the Temple and a sedentary life did not suit him, and in 1815 he determined to make a tour on the continent; with a friend, saddle horses, saddle bags, and two grooms, the route was via Harwich and Helvoetsluys.

One of these grooms, Hartzman, was a deserter from the French army in Spain, and was chosen as conversant with foreign languages. Mr. Gollop kept a careful diary from which a few extracts follow.

The party rode through Holland, and via Osnabruck, Bremen, Brunswick, Magdeburg to Potsdam. On the 30th May they were present at a review of the Prussian army at Berlin.

"The King rode along the whole line beginning from the Charlottenburg end. They are certainly the finest men and the most soldierlike troops I ever saw. These troops, it appears, form the army of reserve."

"On June 1," so runs the diary, "read the English papers. War not yet begun. On the 24th, news arrived of the great victory gained by Wellington and Blucher over Boney; we saw the cannon fired by the palace. The courier who brought the news paraded the streets with postillions, blowing trumpets before, and with lancers behind."

From Berlin they went to Leipsic and surveyed the bridges and remnants of bridges where the French army passed over, the fields covered with their dead bodies, and the tree against which Bonaparte leant and watched the fight.

"We marked the spot whence Poniatowsky, pierced with three mortal wounds, leaped on horseback into the river, and after reaching the opposite bank was again plunged into the water by his recoiling steed."

Dresden was reached on the 6th July. The fortress of Konigstein was visited (but only the outside, spite of every effort to obtain admittance), and the spot where General Moreau was struck by a cannon ball by the side of the Emperor Alexander, 27th August, 1813, is duly noted.

It was at Prague that Mr. Gollop read in the newspapers the convention "between Wellington, Blucher, and the French Provisional Government."

The party reached Vienna on 22nd July. Here a longer stay was made, and an important event took place, for on the 19th September, Mr. Gollop was married according to the rites of the Church of Rome, to Miss Christine Van der Vliegen.

Only after the ceremony did it occur to the bridegroom and bride to enquire whether they had complied with the legal requirements. The lady's guardian Count Bathiany and Mr. Gordon, the British minister, took counsel. It was found that there ought to have been publication of banns in England previously, and that the ambassador should have been present at the Roman Catholic ceremony. It was further found out that the laws of Austria prohibit the performance of a Protestant ceremony after a Catholic one.

Therefore on their return home Mr. and Mrs. Gollop were remarried by license at the Marleybone church on the 6th August, 1816, in the presence of

Mr. Gollop's mother, of Mr. Hunter, and of Mr. and Mrs. Archer Shee, afterwards Sir Martin Archer Shee, president of the Royal Academy. A carriage was now necessary for the honeymoon tour; the friend returned to England, but Mr. Gollop kept on his saddle horses, and rode some of the stages. Gratz, Trieste, Udine, Mestri and Venice were the halts.

On the 12th December, at Venice, being the eighteenth anniversary of the departure of the famous Bronze Horses for Paris, the Emperor of Austria presided at a grand function for their restoration to their former site. An amphitheatre with a raised box was erected in St. Mark's place facing the church. The horses were landed to the roar of cannons and drawn by sailors up the center of the square through an alley of troops. (These horses were in the first place stolen by the Venetians from Greece.)

From Venice the travelers went to Ferrard, Bologna, Florence, reaching Rome on the 3rd January, 1816.

On the 19th they were at Naples. They visited Pompeii and went up Vesuvius. They dismounted at the foot of the main hill, scrambled with difficulty to the top by torchlight, and at last came within sight of the crater, smoke, flames and stones being thrown up. The descent was of course a far easier task, but when the last torch was lighted the guides declared that they had lost their way. "We were between two mighty hills of lava in a sort of gully, stumbling every moment over huge cinders, a Scotch mist wetted us to the skin, a cold wind did not dry us." Between 5 and 6 o'clock there was enough light for the guides to regain the track and the travelers got back to the "Aquila d'Oro," weary but safe.

They now set their faces homewards, pausing at Rome, Florence, Bologna, and Parma. Here Mrs. Gollop's illness detained them a short time. Mr. Gollop rode to the gate of Marengo, and Pietro, the vetturino, presented an ugly little puppy which he said was "motto graziaso." Mrs. Gollop being better they went to the theatre and heard a certain Paganini on the violin, "whom Christine thinks the first player living. He was in prison for some crime and passed ten years there perfecting himself."

Turin, Geneva, (via. Mount Cenis, Chambery, and a village with hot springs, Great Aix) and finally on May 8, Paris was reached, and from Paris Mr. and Mrs. Gollop proceeded to London.

In 1823 Mr. Gollop published a translation of Schiller's minor poems—The Bell, "The Diver," "The Glove," and "The Worth of Women."

In 1834 Mr. Gollop published another translation from the German on a very different subject—a chapter from Eichorn's introductions to the New Testament. And in 1888 his translation of Eichorn's introduction to the Old Testament was printed for private circulation. The translation had been made soon after 1834.

By his first marriage there were two sons and one daughter, by a second marriage, one son and one daughter.

Mr. Gollop died in February 1889; his eldest son in May, 1890.

Mr. Gollop made a short tour of the continent in 1823, but he kept no account of this.

A few years later, after the birth of his first son, Mr. Gollop left Brympton House, near Yeovil, the property of Lord Westmorland, where he had been residing, and determined to live on his property in Dorsetshire. The old mansion at Strode having been converted into a farm house, a new house was begun in 1830, and here Mr. Gollop has lived ever since. The names of his children and dates of their births are to be found in 'Burke's Commoners.

The London World in 1889 says: "Mr. George Tilly Gollop of Strode, will be 98 this year. He is the representative of a very ancient family in the west of England and succeeded to his estates in 1792. He is doubtless the doyen of English squirearchy. Mr. Gollop still takes a keen interest in politics, quotes Horace with singular correctness, and writes charming letters to his daughter, the wife of Mr. Henry Reeve."

Mr. Gollop died at Strode Manor, Netherby, Dorset, March 22, 1889, in the 98th year of his age, leaving a son and daughter.

ORIGIN AND ORTHOGRAPHY OF FAMILY NAME.

[From Burke's Landed Gentry.]

“The name is said to be derived from the German words, ‘Gott and Lobe,’ God and praise, as Godfrey comes, from Gott and Frende, God and peace.”

[From Hon. C. H. Gallup's History of Norwalk, Ohio.]

“In Lorraine, part of the debatable territory between the French and German people; wasted and seared and scarred, by many battles, now in possession of one people, then of another, there is an ancient family of the name of Kolopp,

From time immemorial the tradition has been handed down, by its members from generation to generation, that one of their number went to Western Europe as a follower of William Duke of Normandy, and never returned. This tradition was recently imparted to the writer by the Rev. Peter Kolopp, a member of that family now in charge of St. Peter's (Catholic) church of Norwalk.

As corroborative of the tradition in the Kolopp family of Lorraine, a tradition also exists in the Gallup family of America that the founder of the English branch came into England at the Conquest, from France. This tradition has often been related to the writer by the late Hallet Gallup of Norwalk.

The different spelling of the names, by the two families is no indication of a difference in origin. In those early days education was confined to the monasteries, and family names were perpetuated by the medium of their children, more than by written records.

Afterwards, as education became more general, and men learned to write their names, the manner of spelling them was purely arbitrary, depending upon the sound, or the fancy of the individual. Kolopp is a correct phonetic spelling of the German pronunciation of Gallup.”

In old English records, the name is spelled in several different ways, as Gollop, Gollopp, Golloppe, Golop. The present English family still retain Gollop.

In Boston records, we find almost as great a variety of spelling as given in the ancient English records. Gallup preponderating however, and the latter form of spelling but slightly changed by later generations from our great ancestor's simple orthography, seems, “by common consent to have been adopted by the large majority of his descendants in our country.

FIRST GENERATION.

John Gallop, the ancestor of most of the families of that name in this country, came to America from the Parish of Mosterne, County Dorset, England, in the year 1630.

He was son of John Gollop, who married — Crabbe, who was son of Thomas and Agnes (Watkins) Gollop, of North Bowood and Strode, and whose descendants still own and occupy the manors of Strode.

He was thirty-three years old at the time of the visitation of Dorset, 1623.

He married Christobel, whose full name does not appear, and careful research has failed to discover it.

He sailed from Plymouth, England, March 20, 1630, in the ship Mary and John, arriving at Nantasket, now Hull, May 30th. His wife and children following in 1633.

He went first to Dorchester, but was soon after a resident of Boston. He was admitted to the First Church, January 6, 1634. His wife, Christobel, June 22, 1634. He was made a freeman in April of same year. "He was one of the earliest grantees of land at the northerly part of the town, where he had a wharf-right and house." The locality was known by the name of Gallop's point, and was the southeast part of the peninsula, at the north end of the town.

We find his name first in the town records in 1636, on page 10, where occurs the following entry: "Item: It is ordered that John Gallop shall remove his payles at his yarde ende within 14 days, and to rainge them even with the corner of his house, for the preserving of the way upon the Sea Bancke." This was probably the origin of Middle street, now known as Hanover street.—Extract from an article in Boston Transcript, April 13, 1883, by James H. Stark.

He owned Gallup's Island, where he had a snug farm, with a meadow on Long Island, a sheep pasture on Nix Mate, and a house in Boston.

He was a skilful mariner, well acquainted with the harbor around Boston, and in the habit of making frequent trading expeditions along the coast in his own vessels. One of these expeditions was made forever memorable by the encounter of the murderers of his friend, John Oldham.

[For full account of this first naval exploit off Block Island, July, 1636, see Appendix.]

After the settlement of Rhode Island and Connecticut, his vessel furnished about the only means of communication between the two colonies. At one time there was considerable anxiety in the Rhode Island colony, for John Gallup was delayed in his trip. Soon after, Roger Williams writes Governor Winthrop, beginning in this manner: "God be praised John Gallop has arrived."

He achieved great distinction by piloting in the ship Griffin, a ship of 300 tons, in September, 1633, through a new found channel, when she had on board the Rev. John Cotton, the Rev. Thos. Hooker, Rev. Mr. Stone, and other fathers of New England among her two hundred passengers. Besides these, it is supposed that Mr. Gallop's wife and children were on board.

He died in Boston, January 11, 1650. His wife, Christobel, died in Boston, September 27, 1655. His will and that of his wife's are among the earliest on record, and may be found in the Appendix.*

In this connection, an extract from a letter written by Governor Winthrop to the Rev. John White, of England, referring to John of Masterne, will be enjoyed:

† "I have much difficultye to keepe John Gallop here, by reason his wife will not come. I marvayle at the woman's weaknesse. I pray, persuade and further her coming by all means. If she will come let her have the remainder of his wages; if not, let it be bestowed to bring over his children, for so he desired. It would be about £40 losse to him to come for her.

Your assured in the Lord's worke,

J. WINTHROP.

MASSACHUSETTS, July 4, 1632."

Possibly, Governor Winthrop's pleasure, that the "woman's weakness" had been overcome, enabling her to join her husband, prompted the gift of Gallop's-Island in commemoration of the successful piloting, by her happy husband, of the ship which bore her and so many distinguished ones safely into Boston Harbor.

* Gathered from Winthrop's History. † Found among Gov. Winthrop's papers.

Surely the evening of that eventful September day found no happier man in the settlement than John Gallop, whose stout heart had never, for a moment, failed him or his friends in any of the stern emergencies of those early days; yet had grown weary enough in the prolonged waiting for wife and children, by a lonely fireside, for which he had little more courage than some descendants that bear his name.

On the frontier, men live in heart to heart contact with one another, the interests of one are the interests of all.

Governor Winthrop and family devoutly shared his joy; the arrival of the Governor's family, and the great rejoicing upon that event, when amid the resounding welcome of artillery, "the judges of the court and most of the people of the town went to salute them," occurred but two years before, and doubtless there were many friends to heartily greet the good wife, the only daughter, and three brave lads of John Gallop. Among them all none nearer than the friend, John Mason, with him in the military school in Holland, companion through the voyage on the "Mary and John," and ever after these two were as close friends as peculiar associations and strong natures could make them.

The doubting heart of Christobel, for whom the home in the wilderness and the uncertainties of the voyage seems to have had no attraction, must have been cheered by the warmth of her welcome to the new land, and the kindly and hospitable efforts in her behalf which surely followed, and one can readily believe that in time her steadfast heart became almost as firmly attached to their new home and country as it had before been to dear old England, never forgotten in the new attachment.

She evidently took kindly to no new ways without ample time for consideration of their merits. Her husband always preceded her; she did not become a member of the First Church until six months after his admission to the same. But that the "heart of her husband did safely trust in her even to the end," is assured by the peculiarly respectful, considerate, and affectionate terms and provisions of his will; testifying to his confidence in her excellent judgment when her decisions were reached — and one time more he went before her, taking leave for the Better Country, some six years before the time of her departure therefor.

[Gathered from Winthrop's and Trumbull's Histories.]

In the beginning of 1630 a church was gathered at Plymouth, England, of persons who intended to come to North America in order to enjoy civil and religious privileges. Some time before the 20th of March just as they were about to embark for New England, upon a day of solemn fasting and prayer, they were formed into a Congregational church at the new hospital at Plymouth. They then made choice of Rev. John Warham and Rev. John Maverick to be their pastor and teacher. They were ordained or re-installed to the care of this particular church. The famous Mr. White of Dorchester, preached on this occasion. Mr. Warham had been a noted minister in Exeter, the capital of the county of Devonshire. They sailed from Plymouth, England, on the 20th of March, 1630, in the Mary and John, a ship of 400 tons which had on board 140 persons and arrived at Nantasket, (now Hull) Mass., on the 30th of May. The next day Captain Squeb, the master of the vessel, put them and their goods on shore and left them to shift for themselves notwithstanding his engagement to bring them up the Charles river. (The captain was afterwards obliged to pay damages for this conduct.) But by the assistance of some of the old planters they obtained a boat and proceeded up the Charles river to the place since called Watertown. Here they landed their goods and erected a shelter to cover them, but as they had many cattle and found a neck of land at Mattapan, affording good accommodations for them they all removed to this place and began a settlement there in the early part of June. They named the place Dorchester because many of them came from a town of that name in England. They were chiefly from the counties of Devonshire, Dorsetshire and Somershire. They were a very godly and religious people and many of them, persons of note and figure, being dignified with the title of Mr., which few in those days were. Some of the principal men were Mr. Rosseter, Mr. Ludlow, Mr. Glover, Mr. Wolcott, Mr. Gallop and others. It seems that many of these people were trading men and at first designed Dorchester for a place of commerce, but the channel being poor and the landing difficult, and Boston and Charlestown harbor far from commodious, they desisted from that design and many of them moved afterwards to Boston and other places.

In the summer of 1635, Rev. John Warham removed with his congregation to Windsor, Conn., and began the settlement of that town.

Rev. Ebenezer Rosseter, great grandson of Mr. Edward Rosseter, who came to Dorchester with Mr. Warham, was ordained over First Congregational church at Stonington in 1722, and continued there till his death in 1762.

Matthew Grant, the ancestor of General U. S. Grant, was also a passenger on the "Mary and John," and removed with Mr. Warham to Windsor, Conn. *

JOHN² GALLUP, (*John*¹) son of John and Christobel Gallup, was born in England, and came to this country in 1633. He married in 1643, at Boston, Hannah Lake, daughter of John and Margaret Lake. Madam Margaret Lake was the daughter of Edmund Read, Esq., of Wickford, Essex county, England, and sister of Elizabeth Read, who married John Winthrop, jr., Governor of Connecticut. In early life he showed signs of the bravery which afterwards distinguished him as an Indian warrior. It is supposed he was with his father and assisted him in the capture of John Oldham's vessel, off Block Island. With Massachusetts forces he engaged with his father in the Pequot war and bore himself so bravely that the General Court of Connecticut in 1671 gave him a grant of 100 acres of land. He came to New London in 1650 or '51. The following extracts are from Miss Calkin's History of New London:

"Before the end of the municipal year February 25, 1650-1, we find the names of John Gallup and Mrs. Lake and others, all applicants for house lots."

"On the town street, east of Stallion and Bayley, a lot of ample dimensions was laid out to John Gallup, eight acres in the very heart of the town covering the space east of the town street to the beach and extending north from State street to Federal."

In the colonial records at Hartford may be found the following:

February 9, 1652-3, John Gallup in consideration and with respect unto the services his father hath done for the country, hath given him up the river of Mistick, which side he will 300 acres of upland.

February 6, 1653-4, John Gallup, hath given him a further addition to his land at Mistick, 150 acres, which he accepts of and acknowledgeth himself satisfyde for what lands he formerly laide claim unto upon the general neck as a gift of his father's, which as he saith was given to his father by General Stoughton after the Pequott war.

Having these large grants of land he removed with his family in 1654 to the east side of the Mystic river, now Stonington, where he had taken up the land granted him. He was one of the early settlers of that town. His homestead place was bounded on the west by Mystic river, south by Captain Stanton's homestead place and Captain Denison's land, east by Denison's land and the town lots, and on the north by Robert Park's land. He represented the town at the General Court in 1665 and 1667. He was also an Indian interpreter. When King Philip's war broke out, although he was over sixty, age had not quenched his martial ardor. New London county having raised seventy men under Captain John Mason of Norwich, Captain Gallup joined with him at the head of the Mohegans. These troops forming a junction with those of the other colonies, were engaged in the fearful swamp fight at Narragansett, December 19, 1675, (within the limits of the present town of South Kingston, R. I.)

In storming this fort he led his men bravely forward and was one of the six captains who fell in this memorable fight. A complete victory was here gained over the savage foe, but with great loss of life on both sides. Capt. Gallup was a brave and valuable officer and was loved and respected by his men.

The division made of his estate by order of the County Court was to the widow, £100; to the oldest son John, £137; to Benadam, £90; to William and Samuel, each £89; to the five daughters, £70 each. Mrs. Hannah Gallup had also a large grant of land from the General Court in consideration of her great loss.

MRS. HANNAH (Lake) GALLUP, came to this country with her mother, in the ship Abigail, arriving October 6, 1635, after a passage of ten weeks.

Mrs. Margaret Lake, with her daughters Hannah and Martha, accompanied her sister Elizabeth (Read) Winthrop, the new wife of Gov. John Winthrop, Jr., who returned to America in this ship with commissions from Lord's Say, Brook and others. She left a son in England who never came to America.

As this was the first marriage in the male line of the emigrant ancestors, of the Gallop family, which took place in this country, and the commencement of the American line of descent, the lineage of the wife is here given:

ANCESTRY OF HANNAH (LAKE) GALLOP:

John Lake, the father of Hannah (Lake) Gallop descended from the Lakes of Normantown, Yorkshire, who claimed descent through the Cailleys, from the Albinis, Earls of Arundel and Sussex, from the Counts of Louvaine, (the right line of Charlamagne) and from William the Conquerer.

Margaret (Read) Lake, mother of Hannah (Lake) Gallop, born in England, was the daughter of Edmund Read of Wickford, Essex County. Margaret (Read) Lake of Wickford, died in Ipswich, Mass., 1672.

The youngest sister of Margaret Lake, was the second wife of Gov. John Winthrop, Jr., and the mother of all his children.

Martha Epps, her eldest sister (widow) married for her second husband, Deputy Governor Samuel Symonds, of Ipswich, Mass.

Thomas Read, the brother who came to this country and settled at Salem, Mass., where he was an ensign, returned to England, and entered Cromwell's army, was made a colonel, and assisted General Monk in the restoration of Charles II., was placed in command of Sterling Castle.

Martha, the second daughter of Margaret Lake, married Thomas Harris of Ipswich, Mass., November 15, 1647.

John Lake, the husband of Margaret, never came to this country, died in England.

Margaret Lake died in Ipswich, Mass, 1672. Her will and inventory of her estate are in the appendix.

He represented the town in the General Court in 1685, 1696, 1697, 1698. He served with his father in Philips war, and was probably with him at the Narragansett swamp fight. He was on friendly terms with the Indians, and often acted as their interpreter. In 1701 a committee was appointed to find out and renew the bounds of the Winthrop land purchase, at Plainfield, Conn. This committee consisted of prominent men of the town, and a large number of Indians who served as guides. John Gallup acted as interpreter for the Indians. He owned land in Plainfield, but never removed there to live. He died April 14, 1735.

Lieut. WILLIAM^s GALLUP (John^s, John¹) son of John and Hannah Lake Gallup, was born at Stonington, in 1658, married Sarah Cheesebrough, whose father was Samuel Cheesebrough, of Rehoboth, Mass., one of the early settlers of Stonington, January 4, 1687. He was one of the most prominent men in the history of the town, was active in his efforts to promote and advance its prosperity. He represented the town in the General Court for ten years, first in 1703, and afterwards from 1708 to 1717. In Miss Larned's History of Windham County there is a mention of him at Plainfield, in the early settlement of that town. He owned a large tract of land there near the school house, now known as the Whitehall school house. But it is not probable that he ever removed his family there to live. He was admitted to the First Congregational Church of Stonington, April 18, 1689. He died at Stonington, May 15, 1731. His wife died, September 9, 1729. They are both buried in the Whitehall burying ground.

The following from the Providence Journal, published a few years ago, gives an idea of his character and the esteem in which he was held at that time:

"Of the broad spirit and good cheer among the best settlers of Stonington, Conn., we may give a story as furnished by Mrs. L. F. Denison (now 90 years of age), as she received it in early life from the lips of relatives, who proudly cherished the family tradition as descriptive of a golden day in the town's history. A marriage occurred in the family of Mr. William Gallup, who lived in the best of style, for his day, on his ample estate on the left bank of the Mystic River, his mansion house being on the present White Hall farm, above Elm Grove Cemetery, the fine mansion probably receiving the old English name, White Hall. His daughter, Temperance, was married to the Rev. William Worthington, one of the first ministers in the northern portion of the township. As a measure of affluence had sprung from the virgin soil of the valley, and colonial life was blooming into a degree of luxury and taste befitting the inherited qualities of the Puritan planters, the wedding was made to comport with the dignity of the large plantation and the blood of the families to be united. Mr. Gallup extended an invitation to the settlers of the town to be present at the nuptials. Arrangements broad and generous were accordingly made. Field and fold, stall and cellar, purse and pantry, were widely opened. The day chosen September 20, 1726, a golden autumn day in a prospered year. The invitation was honored. By roads and bridle paths came saddles and pillions with gayest riders in old English costume, as high civic and military rank belonged to the family whose great mansion doors now stood ajar. With the settlers and their families came also the friendly remnant of the Pequot Indians, then occupying reserved lands in the northern portion of the town. Mr. Gallup found himself more popular than he had supposed. The Pequots were his friends and admirers, and had an inherited relish for large and abundant feasts. The guests of rank filled the mansion, and the glad ceremony was duly performed, to the joy of all parties. But Mr. Gallup was compelled to explain to his aboriginal friends, and asked them to visit him the next day, when they should receive his attention and find full proof of his hospitality. As they wound their way back to their wigwams in open Indian file after their native manner, the line extended from the Gallup mansion well on to the head of the river, nearly a mile. On the following day the Pequots returned, plumed and mantled in their best, and closed the festive scenes by sharing all that had been promised them. None went away hungry or thirsty. Mr. Gallup's father was the brave Captain John Gallup, who led the friendly Mohegans in King Philip's war, and fell at their head during the great swamp fight in South Kingston, R. I., December 19, 1675. The family of his daughter Temperance became conspicuous in Connecticut history. One of her grandsons became Governor of the State."

Mrs. Lovina Fish Denison, who furnished the above narrative, was of the Gallup family, being a daughter of Bridget Gallup, who married Sands Fish, and who was a daughter of Benadam and Bridget Palmer Gallup of the sixth generation. She died July 22, 1890, at the age of 96.

He is probably the one referred to in following account, from New England Historical and Genealogical Register.

“The Council having been informed that Thomas Hawkins and others were acting as pirates, ordered the sloop Restitution, with forty men, Joseph Thaxter, master, to go after them. These pirates took the Ketch Mary, of Salem, 9th August, 1689, three leagues from Half-way Rock. They captured the brig Merrimack, of Newburyport, on the 22d, in Vineyard Sound. Then Captain Samuel Pease was sent after them in the sloop Mary of Boston. He came up with, and fought one, in ‘Martin Vineyard Sound.’ They killed Captain Pease, and wounded some of his crew, but were taken by his Lieutenant, Benjamin Gallop, and in October brought to Boston, where four of them belonged. They were condemned to die, but reprieved. Among them was the notorious pirate, Tom Pound, who was afterward hung in chains on the (then) island, ‘Nix Mate,’ in Boston Harbor.”

Captain JOHN⁴ GALLUP (John³, John², John¹), son of John and Elizabeth Harris Gallup, was born at Stonington, Conn., 1675. Married Elizabeth Wheeler, of Stonington, in 1709, daughter of Isaac and Martha Park Wheeler, and granddaughter of Thomas Wheeler, who was born in England in 1602, and came to this country in 1630. She was born May 22, 1683. He removed to Voluntown about 1710, and was one of the early settlers of that town, taking up a large tract of land there, which remains in the Gallup family to this time, 1891. [History of Windham County]. At the first town meeting held in the town, June 20, 1721, he was chosen one of the Selectmen. His name is mentioned in all important transactions of the town. He was active in securing religious privileges for the early settlers, giving three acres of land as a site for a meeting house and burial ground, and was one of a committee to build a house of worship. He was chosen one of the ruling elders of the first church formed in the town, which was Presbyterian. He was chosen captain of the first military company organized in Voluntown, in 1726. A copy of his commission may be found in the Appendix. He died December 29, 1755. His wife, Elizabeth Gallup died April 14, 1735. From his will it appears that he contracted a second marriage, but no record of it has been found.

THOMAS⁴ GALLUP (John³, John², John¹), son of John and Elizabeth Harris Gallup, was baptized at Stonington, Conn., April 30, 1682. [Voluntown Town Records]. "Thomas Gallup and Hannah French were lawfully joined in marriage the 4th day of January, 1721-22, by Captain Thomas Williams, Justice of the Peace." He probably came to Voluntown with his brother John, or soon after, and was a large land holder there. His name is appended to a call to the first minister of Voluntown, Rev. Samuel Dorrance, April 17, 1723. He also gave liberally for his support. He left no children.

SAMUEL⁴ GALLUP (John³, John², John¹), son of John and Elizabeth Harris Gallup, was born at Stonington, baptized October 9, 1687. He married Mehitable Blount, May 11, 1727. He owned land at Voluntown, and his name is found among those who signed the formal call to the first minister. He also subscribed five pounds money and a cow and calf as a free gift to the prospective minister, over and above his proportion raised by the vote of the town. But it is not probable that he ever removed his family there to live, as he is mentioned in his father's will as living with him and taking care of him. He and his wife, Mehitable, united with the first church in Stonington, May 11, 1729.

† "Temperance Worthington, daughter of Rev. William and Temperance Gallup Worthington, married Rev. Cotton Mather Smith, of Sharon, Conn., who was descended from Rev. Harvey Smith, a minister of the Gospel, in Wethersfield, Conn., who left a paternal estate in England, and an eligible position in society, that in this new land he might enjoy the rights of conscience. He died in 1648. His great grand-son, Samuel Smith, Esq., of Suffield, Conn., married Jerusha Mather, daughter of Rev. Cotton Mather of Boston, grand-daughter of Rev. Increase Mather, and great grand-daughter of Rev. Richard Mather of Dorchester, who fled from England for conscience sake. The Rev. John Cotton of Boston was the father of the wife of Increase Mather, and thus the great grandfather of Mrs. Smith of Suffield. Her son, born October 16, 1731, she named Cotton Mather, and early destined him for the sacred profession of his ancestors. At Yale College, where he was graduated in 1751, he was distinguished for amiable temper, bodily activity, graceful manners, industry, and elegant literature. He was ordained pastor of the church in Sharon, Conn., August 23, 1755. This office he held until his death, November 27, 1806.

Soon after his settlement in Sharon, Mr. Smith married a daughter of Rev. William Worthington of Saybrook. This lady gladdened the heart of her husband, made his household happy and respectable, and added much to the efficiency and popularity of his ministry. The children of this family were six, the youngest of whom, the only son who became an adult, was the Hon. John Cotton Smith, one of the Governors of Connecticut. He was also President of the American Bible Society from 1831 to 1845."

The above is taken from a historical discourse delivered at Litchfield, Conn., July 8, 1852, at the centennial of the North and South Consociations of Litchfield county, by the late Rev. Dr. McEwen of New London, Conn.

BENJAMIN³ GALLUP (Benjamin⁴, John³, John², John¹), son of Benjamin and Theody (Park) Gallup, born at Voluntown, Windham county, Conn., 1739. Married first, Sarah Lawrence; married second, Mrs. Abiah Everett. He removed to Dalton, Mass., with his brother John, about 1770, being among the first settlers of that town. The history of Berkshire county says:

"Among the Revolutionary soldiers were Benjamin Gallup and John Gallup from Dalton. Benjamin Gallup was on the Pittsfield list of soldiers December 15, 1794. At the first town meeting held in Dalton, the money for a meeting house was raised by selling pew ground. In January, 1795, twenty-two pews were sold. The sale was by auction, and each purchaser was to build his pew and choose his own associates. Benjamin Gallup took lot No. 4 for $30, and had three associates; Jesse Merriam took lot No. 9 for $24, and Luther Gallup, son of Benjamin, was his associate."

Benjamin was the inventor and manufacturer of the first plows made in Berkshire county, and also made fanning mills, spinning wheels, reels, and other implements adapted to the needs of those times. When 100 years old, he was taken by his townsmen to Pittsfield to attend the Berkshire county cattle show, where he held one of his own make of plows, to which were attached as many yoke of oxen as he was years old, and turned a neat furrow all the way around the old park. When aged 101, a large concourse of townspeople gathered at his home to celebrate his birthday, and Rev. Mr. Boise delivered a sermon from Gen. xlvii 8: "And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, how old art thou?"

He raised a large family of children, some of whom settled in Dalton, and others went west and no record has been obtained of them. He died at Dalton, November 14, 1841, aged 102. His first wife, Sarah Lawrence Gallup, died in 1800; his second wife, Abiah Gallup, died January 11, 1842, aged 89.

Captain Adam Larrabee, who married Hannah Gallup Lester, was born in Ledyard, Conn., March 14, 1787, graduated from United States Military Academy at West Point, March 1, 1811. Upon the completion of his studies he was appointed second lieutenant of light artillery, promoted to first lieutenant two months later. After heroic service on the northern frontier, in 1812 and 1814, being severely wounded at La Colle Mills, he was promoted to a captaincy, but resigned his commission in 1815, and retired to his farm at Windham, Conn. Held many positions of trust afterward. "The business of his civil life was farming, and in this he won very conspicuous success." He was for over fifty years continuously one of the trustees of the old savings bank of Norwich, Conn. He was not only a hard worker, but very frugal in his own habits; but to proper objects of charity and the cause of religion he was always a most liberal giver. His systematic training at West Point was visible in all his after life, and his ideas of hard work, economy, business integrity, order and punctuality were a most precious legacy to his sons, who have been abundantly prospered through the same praiseworthy qualities. He died in Windham, Conn., October 25, 1869.—Taken from Hon. C. Aldrich's "An Early West Pointer."

His son, William Larrabee, inherited a generous portion of his father's sturdy and noble characteristics. Removing from his Connecticut home in 1853, he engaged in farming and manufacturing at Clermont, Iowa; in 1867 was elected State Senator, and after a faithful service of eighteen years in the interest of the people, resigned, and was elected to more exalted service as Governor, in 1885, re-elected in 1887, and is now known everywhere as Iowa's most valiant defender of the common people's rights and liberties against railroad oppression, which had become a most important issue in Iowa politics.

From his second Inaugural we quote: "In every transaction growing out of the relations between these [railroad] corporations and the people, we find an expert on one side and a novice on the other." From a most thorough and exhaustive knowledge of both sides of the grave question, Governor Larrabee, impelled by the purest and highest motives, warmly and effectively espoused the cause of the novice. In his own words:

“The Railroad Commission was created to be a committee of the people, obligated to advocate their rights; organized capital can safely be trusted to take care of itself.” If an official should consult simply his feelings, he might easily be tempted to make a truce with the enemy, and thus avoid implacable conflict. But when such a step can only be taken at the sacrifice of honor, when a solemn obligation makes the conflict an imperative duty, there is no alternative.

“In the discharge of my official duties, it has been my earnest endeavor to promote the welfare of the commonwealth by divesting myself of all personal, local, and partisan considerations, and rendering obedience only to the law and the dictates of my conscience.—Inaugural of Feb. 12, 1890.

Governor Larrabee now lives on the home farm at Clermont, Iowa.

WILHELMINA	DENNIS, d. Dec. 11, 1876, aged 11.
LOUIS RATHAN	“ living at Tacoma, Wash.
HENRY GARDNER	“ living at Omaha, Neb.

General Dennis served in the late war, from its beginning till its close. He enlisted in the Worcester Light Infantry, April 16, 1861. This regiment was attached to the old Sixth Massachusetts Volunteers, and marched with them through Baltimore on the 19th of April, 1861. He served as private for three months, for which he enlisted, and was mustered out of service August 2, 1861, on Boston Common. Went immediately to Norwich, Conn., raised a company from New London county, was commissioned captain, August 26, 1861, joined Seventh Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers, Colonel (afterwards General) Alfred H. Terry commander; mustered into United States service, September 5, 1861, and started for the seat of war September 17, 1861. He was in the original expedition with General T. W. Sherman to South Carolina, was at the siege and reduction of Fort Pulaski, in winter of 1861 and '62, at the battle of Secessionville, June 16, 1862, took rebel batteries at St. John's Bluff, Fla., November, 1862, at the siege and reduction of Forts Wagner and Sumter, from July to November 7, 1863, besides being engaged in many other conflicts requiring arduous and perilous service. He joined the Army of the James May, 1864, commanded regiment in all of the battles about Petersburg, Va., including Drury's Bluff, 14th and 16th of May, 1864, Battle of Weir Bottom Church, June 2, 1864, and was captured by the rebels; was prisoner of war in Wilmington, Petersburg, Charleston, Savannah, Macon, and sent to Charleston, again to be placed under fire of our own batteries from Morris Island, and after about two months sent to Columbia, S. C., made his escape on November 4, 1864, but the boat in which he was going down the river sank, and after being nearly drowned and chilled to death, succeeded in getting out of the water, was recaptured, taken back to Columbia, and on the 28th of November escaped again, succeeded in reaching the coast, and was taken on board the gun boat Nipsic, and reached home on the 22d of December. He was commissioned as Colonel by Governor Buckingham of Connecticut soon after his escape from prison, but declined the commission, and accepted appointment as Paymaster, with rank of major, and served until 1866, when he left the service, having been promoted to the rank of brigadier general; afterwards paymaster general of South Carolina, with rank of brigadier general, and later commanded the Dakota National Guard, with rank of brigadier general. He was elected to the South Carolina Legislature in 1868, and again in 1870. In the spring of 1878 he was appointed quartermaster's agent and ordered to Yankton, Dakota, resigned in 1879 to become an internal revenue officer, which position he held nine years. In 1889 he was appointed chief deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of Nebraska, with headquarters at Omaha, where he now is.

Although not bearing the name of Gallup, General Dennis has shown that he inherited the same spirit of bravery and patriotism which animated his early ancestors.

HENRY⁶ GALLUP (Henry⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), son of Henry and Hannah (Mason) Gallup, born at Groton, Conn., October 17, 1757, married Desire Stanton, November 17, 1792.

ANDREW⁶ GALLUP (Henry⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), son of Henry and Hannah (Mason) Gallup, was born in Groton, Conn., June 26, 1761; married Nancy Weldon, December 16, 1792.

Andrew Gallup was a brave soldier of the Revolution, was at the massacre at Fort Griswold, September 6, 1781, where he was severely wounded. He was an artillery man of the regular garrison; while working his gun before the capture of the fort, he was struck by a musket ball coming through the embrasure, passing through his hip. He said he would have had another shot at the British if the boy who was bringing the cartridge from the magazine had not been killed and himself hit before another could pick up and bring along the charge. He was soon taken away from his post at the gun, and laid helpless on the ground out of the way, facing the north gate, and saw while lying thus the enemy rush in through the gateway, and heard the shout of the British officer at the head of the advancing column: "Who commands this post?" and the reply of Colonel Ledyard, as he advanced to meet him, handing him his sword: "I did, but you do now," which the officer took, and infuriated by the unexpected slaughter, immediately plunged it into Ledyard's breast. Mr. Gallup quite naturally remarked whenever he told it, "I'd have given anything in the world to have been on my feet then." Afterward he was stabbed with a bayonet as he lay helpless on the ground, the point striking a rib glanced to one side, making a long though not a deep wound, leaving a large scar; he was also stabbed in the arm. He was one of the wounded soldiers who were put in a cart or wagon and sent rolling down the hill, while suffering intense pain from his wounds. Possessing a strong and vigorous constitution, he recovered from these severe wounds, though he felt the effect of this battle long afterwards; pieces of the bone came from the wound in his hip for years after. After the war he settled in Groton as a farmer, and despite the sufferings of his early life, he lived to the advanced age of nearly 93 years, dying at his home in Ledyard, March 16, 1853.

ROBERT⁶ GALLUP (Thomas P⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), son of Thomas P. and Prudence (Allyn) Gallup, born at Groton, Conn., April 30, 1760, married Polly Baker.

He was a Revolutionary soldier, was severely wounded at the battle of Groton Heights, September 6, 1781; one of the brave men who fought with the gallant Colonel Ledyard. Preserved almost as by a miracle from death on Groton Heights, he went to the State of New York about the year 1806, and was one of the first settlers of the town of Plymouth. The thrilling story of his escape from death was wonderful to the young men of Plymouth. One of them, no longer young, writes in this manner: "I can well remember the story he used to tell us children of being taken prisoner, and ordered to say, 'God bless the king,' and how he changed the phraseology. And then he would tell us of the terrible massacre at Fort Griswold, of the brave defence made by Colonel Ledyard and his little band of volunteers, his lips quivering with agitation at the thought of the brutality of the British soldiers, of how the enemy came marching up the hill, captured the lower fort, and then rushed pell mell in upon them, of how he was wounded in the side just before the final assault, and awakened from a swoon in time to see the sword plunged into Colonel Ledyard's breast; and then came the slaughter of the men, and last of all the wounded soldiers were collected in a cart and sent rolling down the hill among the rocks and stumps."

Mr. Gallup was one of those sent on that terrible ride, but more fortunate than others, he was thrown out part way down the hill, and lay bleeding and groaning on the green sward. He had just raised himself on his elbow, and plunged his thumb into his wound to check the flow of blood, when a British soldier struck him with his musket and run him through with a bayonet. Insensibility followed, and for the rest of the day he lay as one dead, utterly oblivious of the burning and plundering across the river. He was found in this condition the next morning by his mother, who went to the fort searching for him.

His life at Plymouth was that of a quiet farmer, he took a live interest in the prosperity of the new town. After the death of his wife he left Plymouth to live with his married daughter in Greene. It was here that he died. The battle scarred remains of the veteran were taken back to Plymouth, and laid beside those of his wife. At his grave is a simple marble slab with this inscription:

ROBERT GALLUP, Died August 20, 1858, AGED 98 YEARS, 3 MONTHS AND 20 DAYS. A Soldier of the Revolution Wounded at Fort Griswold.

A small United States flag floats over the mound, and a wreath of faded flowers tells the story of the devotion of some of Plymouth's little girls to the Fort Griswold veteran who is buried near their home. Each Memorial Day they pay their loving tribute to his memory, and on September 6, 1891, the anniversary of the battle, a new flag and a fresh bunch of flowers were deposited there.

Captain Latham was second in command at the massacre of Fort Griswold, and was severely wounded but recovered. He died January 27, 1792, aged 51 years; his wife Eunice died March 5, 1799, aged 56. Lucy Latham, afterward Mrs. Gallup, was 12 years old at the time of the battle, and often related to her grand children the story of that memorable day. When the British appeared at Eastern Point, Lambo, the old colored servant, gathered the family and drove them to the Avery house, two miles away, then hurried back to the fort with his gun. He fought at the side of his master, Captain Latham, and fell. His name is on the monument at Groton as "Sambo," but it should be Lambo, as his name was Lambert. Samuel Gallup, father of Nathaniel, removed with his family to Albany Co., N. Y., soon after the war of the Revolution. Nathaniel returned to Groton, and was married there. There is a record that he sailed from Groton, Conn., for Albany, N. Y., in Captain David Perry's sloop in 1795. After his return to New York State, he settled in Berne, Albany Co. Died April 20, 1834; Lucy Latham, his wife, died February 1, 1862.

HALLET⁷ GALLUP (William⁶, William⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), son of William and Freelove (Hathaway) Gallup; born at Kingston, Pa., May 1, 1796; married April 9, 1820, Clarissa Benedict, daughter of Platt and Sally Benedict, of Norwalk, Ohio. At his birth a relative at Groton, Conn., sent to his parents a wampum belt given by a friendly Indian to one of his ancestors in 1675, as a warning of the trouble soon to culminate in that historic event known as “King Phillips’ war.” This was given with the request to name him Hallet. The belt is made of the long coarse hair of the black bear ornamented with white beads set in the form of a “W,” which indicated war. That belt is yet in almost perfect preservation in the possession of Carroll Gallup of Norwalk. In the war of 1812 he joined Captain Thomas’ company of Pennsylvania volunteers and served in the artillery under Harrison. On being mustered out of service at the close of the war in 1816 he came to Bloomingsville, Ohio, and in 1818 came to Norwalk, then a new settlement, where he became a prominent citizen. In 1819 he was appointed collector of the then Huron County. He died at Norwalk, July 11, 1877. His wife died January 11, 1878. Children all born at Norwalk.

JOHN DOUGLASS^a GALLUP (Isaac⁷, John⁶, Isaac⁵, John⁴, John³, John², John¹), son of Isaac and Olive (Park) Gallup; born at Voluntown, Conn., October 1, 1820; married Martha Dame Allen, June 20, 1854, daughter of Rev. Jacob and Mercy Dame Allen of Sterling, Conn., who was pastor of the Congregational Church at Sterling for nearly twenty years. They lived at North East, Dutchess Co., N. Y., removed to Agawam, Mass., 1858, where he is now living, and is the compiler of these records.

The following sketch, written by Miss Emily Gallup, grand-daughter of Andrew Gallup, one of the survivors of the battle of Fort Griswold, at Groton, Conn., is given a place here with some hesitation; not from any want of confidence in the sincerity of the writer, but from the author's reluctance to ascribe praise to himself.

[I have just copied the above brief notice of John Douglass Gallup, and am suddenly inspired to "put in a word" which I shall ask to have inserted here:]

The pen that has written uncounted words of praise for others has been silent here. And the book would ever be incomplete without something more of the one who has given to us this bestowal of long-lost facts, concerning our ancestry. But that word one, in the singular number, does not mean one individual only, as Mrs. Gallup's interests are one with her husband's, for to her unceasing enthusiasm and faithful devotion to the real work of preparation, is its successful termination chiefly due.

"I would," that all who read might have shared with me the comfort of hearing from their lips the story of the book's beginning.

The first impulse came from the lips of Captain Gallup's very aged mother, whose remarkably accurate knowledge of very many who bear the family name, was thought worthy of preservation, and Mrs. Gallup's pencil carefully recorded facts as she gave them without one thought of the book, genealogical, historical, which has finally developed therefrom.

There are many unwritten stories of different members of that family, now gone, of whom Captain Gallup has told me in the quiet evenings by his hospitable fireside.

One was, of an Indian wigwam that stood in the yard of Captain Gallup's great-great-grandfather, Captain John Gallup, of Sterling, Conn. Different Indians occupying the same, whenever they willed, usually going away in the summer, and returning for a time each fall, on their way to Narragansett Bay, for a winter's stay.

Upon their leaving, all their effects were tied in bundles and stored in the ample garret of Mr. Gallup's house, where they remained, safe from all intrusion, until again claimed by their respective owners.

They had an orchard of their own planting, on the farm, traces of which still remain.

They enjoyed their portion of apples and cider until the cider proved an injury, when they were kindly and firmly told, they must give it up or remove. This was not an acceptable message, but after serious consideration, never doubting Mr. Gallup's sincerity, they decided to forego the pleasures of the beverage, and retain their transient home. And here they came for many years in comfortable security, happy in a sense of joint ownership of all the good things the farm afforded. Mr. Gallup was their protector, interpreter, and friend.

This is only one of many memories, proving that our ancestors were not "Indian fighters" from impulses of inhumanity, but, when their homes and helpless ones were imperiled, they shrank not from the severest duty men ever meet in their defense. And the grateful hearts of their descendants, living in different times, hold only love and honor for the kind natures that dared to be so brave.

The present Captain John D. Gallup also owned, between the years 1870 and 1881, the steam yachts Mayflower and River Belle, long familiar to citizens of Springfield and all along shore down to Saybrook, remembered today by hundreds of excursionists who enjoyed their comfortable appointments on their way to "Gallup's Grove," on the cool shore of the Connecticut, for a restful day and a return sail to Springfield, Holyoke, and various points, at its close. Photographs of these boats hang over the table where these manuscripts have been prepared. One has on board the members of the Episcopal Sunday School of Christ's Church, Springfield, with Bishop Burgess, a prominent figure, in view.

No fear of stern encounters with "Red Men," by this Captain Gallup, but he can point out many of their ancient camping-places. He has an interesting collection of "Indian relics," many of them gathered along the shore of this fair Connecticut, memorable in its silent associations of the days of our ancestors.

The children of this family are direct descendants in the maternal line from John Alden and his wife, Priscilla Mullins (or Molines) of the Mayflower, thus:

	JOHN ALDEN m. PRISCILLA MULLINS.

Some of the writers on Alden lore credit David Alden with one daughter only. A thorough investigation by the Hon. Richard A. Wheeler of Stonington, Conn., gives him five daughters, one of whom (Elizabeth) married John Seabury of Duxbury, Dec. 9, 1697, removed to Stonington, Conn., thence to Groton, Conn., in 1704, and became the grandmother of Bishop Seabury.

Priscilla, another daughter of David Alden, married Samuel Cheesebrough (2d) of Stonington, Jan. 4, 1699, as above.

PALMER^s GALLUP (*Benadam*¹, *Benadam*⁶, *Benadam*⁴, *Benadam*⁵, *Benadam*³, *John*², *John*¹), son of Benadam and Cynthia (Fish) Gallup, born at Groton, June 14, 1802; married Desire Ball at West Springfield (now Agawam), May 22, 1828, daughter of Captain Eli Ball, whose ancestor, Francis Ball, was one of the first settlers of West Springfield in 1640. He died at Mystic, Conn., December 31, 1880; his wife died, February 20, 1869.

The following tribute to his memory was chiefly written by a former scholar and friend, the Rev. Frederick Dennison, a native of Mystic Bridge:

“Palmer Gallup died at Mystic River, his native place, December 31, 1880, in his 79th year. He was a remarkable scholar, mathematician, teacher, musician, and musical composer of unusual talent. For a time he was a musical teacher among the eminent musicians of Boston. His compositions have gone rapidly throughout the country, and are classical in their character. He was the owner of, and performer on the largest double bass viol in the world. He assisted largely in arranging standard almanacs, was the author of Olney's Arithmetic, and made important contributions to various mathematical publications; was an adept in the higher mathematics, including the integral calculus; also became an expert translator of the Latin poets; was a popular surveyor, and prepared a map of his native place, the Mystic Valley. He was connected for a time with the Connecticut Literary Institution at Suffield, Conn., also Mystic River Institute, and a very thorough teacher for half a century. He prized knowledge above gold, and strove to win it; his next passion was to communicate it to others. His life was devoted to the acquisition and communication of knowledge. In these two points lay the secret of his life. His love of the Holy Scriptures was intense, the study of which was his great delight, their purity and grandeur being to him an inspiration. His life was pure, plain, laborious, studious, kind, generous, and charitable. He was a lover of chaste, intelligent company, and has now gone to his home of purity and wisdom. His name and pure character will be gratefully remembered by thousands. At his funeral, portions of Scripture of his own selection were read, and music of his own composition was sung. In death he realized his oft repeated prayer, 'Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his.'"

 from his country in January, 1863, at the early age of 19 years.
 Enlisted in the First Connecticut Cavalry, and was soon promoted to the rank of orderly sergeant. He was engaged in several battles, including the battle of Winchester, and was with General Sheridan during his famous raid through the Shenandoah Valley.
 His superior officers gave him the name of a thoroughly good young man, and that of a very brave soldier. His captain said in writing after his death, "If I had an errand that needed true courage and pluck, I assigned it to Sergeant Gallup, and it was always sure to be done." He was taken to Third Division Hospital, at Kearnstorm, Va., and died Dec. 10, 1864. A letter from Surgeon R. H.
 Goodell reads as follows: "I knew he was somebody's dear one.
 His pleasant face and true manly bearing endeared him to all."
 He was buried in Elm Grove Cemetery, Mystic Bridge, Conn.

Dr. JOHN CHESTER⁸ GALLUP (John⁷, Benadam⁶, Benadam⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), son of John and Lucy (Clark) Gallup; born in Brooklyn, Conn., February 27, 1812. At the age of 16 he began the study of Latin and chemistry with a private tutor, and at the age of 17 he entered the office of Dr. J. B. Whitcomb as a student of medicine. He was graduated from the Berkshire Medical College at Pittsfield, Mass., in 1833. Here he began the practice of medicine, and in 1836 removed to Mount Clemens, Mich. In 1839 he removed to Fentonville, Mich., where he passed ten busy, prosperous years. In 1849, owing to impaired health, Dr. Gallup removed to Palmyra, N. Y., and for six years was engaged in professional and benevolent labors. While a student at Pittsfield, Mass., he joined the First Congregational Church. Removing out of a Congregational neighborhood he became an elder in the Presbyterian Church at Palmyra. In 1858 he accepted an appointment from the trustees of Ingham University at LeRoy. During his first year at LeRoy, Dr. Gallup married Marilla Houghton, a sister of Henry O. Houghton, of the publishing house of Houghton, Mifflin & Co. In the spring of 1861 he entered upon the crowning work of his life as the founder and proprietor of Houghton Seminary, at Clinton, N. Y. He was then in vigorous health, an approved teacher, with intellectual powers well trained for the difficult duties of a large educational enterprise. Under his skillful and enterprising guidance with the competent aid of Mrs. Gallup, this institution soon won for itself the attachment and support of many faithful friends. It prospered by loyalty to the highest standard of intellectual, social, and spiritual culture. Houghton Seminary had no other endowment than the blessing of Heaven upon thorough work in all branches of instruction. Its diploma has been from the outset a badge of actual scholarship and high character.

As an elder in the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Gallup was repeatedly a commissioner to the General Assembly, and in 1874 was a delegate to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland. This opened the way for a summer of European travel which yielded large returns of enjoyment and profit.

In early life he identified himself with the benevolent reforms of the day. He was an original abolitionist and confidential friend of James G. Birney, and personally acquainted with most of those distinguished men, like Gerritt Smith, Wendell Phillips, William Lloyd Garrison, John G. Whittier, the leading spirits in this great movement. In the temperance reform he was a most untiring worker. His fervid eloquence and personal magnetism gave him great influence whether in local meetings or national conventions, while his unquestioned consistency to his principles gave force to his advocacy of total abstinence. He resigned the direction of Houghton Seminary in 1880 to Prof. A. G. Benedict, with the feeling that his earthly labors were substantially ended. He died in Clinton, April 15, 1884.

[The above facts were gathered from a memorial of him published soon after his death.]

JAMES A.⁶ GALLUP (Russell¹, Isaac⁶, Benadam⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), son of Russell and Hannah (Morgan) Gallup, born in Ledyard, Conn., November 15, 1823. In early life he attended the common school in his native town, and taught school for four winters. He prepared for college at Bacon Academy, Colchester, Conn., and in Philips Academy, Andover, Mass., entered Yale College in September, 1847, and was graduated from the class of 1851. He studied theology in the New Haven Divinity School from 1851 to 1854, ordained to the ministry, and settled over the Congregational Church in Essex, Conn., May 17, 1854. After a very successful pastorate he was dismissed, October 4, 1865, and installed over the Congregational Church in Madison, Conn., November 2, 1865, where he has remained to the present time. He married first, Emily T. Hubbard of New Haven, June 21, 1854; she died May 3, 1870; married second, Charlotte R. Andrew, November 28, 1876.

After the above was written, a letter from Essex, Conn., was received, from which the following extracts are taken:

"Rev. James A. Gallup was ordained at Essex as first pastor of a new church, and immediately showed himself as 'the man for the place,' bringing to the work both energy and enthusiasm. Under his ministry, the church rapidly gained in strength and efficiency. His people were heartily united in him. He identified himself fully with every good work in the community; aided in educational matters, as well as other interests pertaining to the welfare of the people. When called to a larger field, and a proportionately greater work, our sorrow was as hearty as was our love for our first pastor. And now, after a separation of more than twenty years, he still retains a warm place in our hearts, and most cordially we welcome his occasional visits. This brief testimony to the value of his life and work among us is not colored by personal friendship, but abundantly approved by facts held in grateful remembrance."

Y., and in 1857 commenced the study of law, in 1858 graduated from the Cincinnati Law School, and soon after opened an office at Norwalk. He removed in 1859 to St. Johns, Mich., and was admitted July 19 to practice law in the courts of that state. The next summer he removed to Port Austin, Huron Co., Mich., and the same year was elected the first prosecuting attorney of that county. He was re-elected for four succeeding terms, holding the office for ten years. He also held the offices of circuit court commissioner, and injunction master, township treasurer, and several other minor offices. During the war of the rebellion he acted as deputy United States marshal for the Western district of Huron Co., Mich.; was himself "drafted," and instead of being sent to the "front" was ordered back to duty as deputy marshal. In 1866 he was elected a member of the Michigan legislature for two years, and while acting in that capacity introduced and obtained the passage of a joint resolution calling on Congress to provide for and construct a harbor of refuge at or near Point Au Barques, Lake Huron. This was the first step ever taken to obtain such a harbor, and did not meet with immediate success; but it set the movement on foot that eventually culminated in the magnificent harbor of refuge now nearly completed at Sand Beach, Huron Co., Mich. In 1867-8-9 he made repeated efforts to obtain an extension of the Western Union Telegraph line from Lexington (seventy miles) to Port Austin, and with success. On July 9, 1872, he removed with his children back to Norwalk, Ohio, his present residence, where he is now President of the Home Savings and Loan Company.

Major HENRY AYER^s GALLUP (Andrew H.¹, Andrew⁶, Henry⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), son of Andrew H. and Nancy (Ayer) Gallup, born at the Ayer homestead in Preston, Conn., May 7, 1834. In his earliest years he showed a rich endowment of individual gifts and graces, besides inheriting many of the mental characteristics of both his parents. Making the best possible use of school privileges in New England, his studies were continued in the west while teaching in the public schools of Illinois, to which state his father removed in 1853. October 22, 1856, he married Lizzie Cox of Ashmore, Ill. In April, 1858, he was admitted to the practice of law in the courts of Illinois. The following year he began the practice of his profession in Brownsville, Texas; soon after assumed control of The American Flag, published at Brownsville and Matamoras, Mexico, in both the English and Spanish languages. Through the perilous days preceding secession of that state, The Flag remained true to its convictions of loyalty to the Union, the national banner floating undisturbed over its office, even after secession ordinance had been passed. A brief absence of the editor from the city gave an opportunity for its removal. The Confederate flag greeted his return, waving over a vacant office. The printing press had been removed to Mexico, where it remained until some three years ago, when it was returned to American soil. Returning to his Illinois home, early in 1861, he raised a battallion of Illinois men for the cavalry service, receiving a major's commission from General Fremont, then commander of the Department of Mississippi. To the regret of General Fremont and the Illinois men, this battallion was united with a smaller portion of a Missouri regiment, unfairly receiving name of Third Missouri, serving in that state and vicinity during the war. After the war he settled in New Orleans, resuming practice of his profession, in partnership with Horace M. Jordan of Portland, Me.; he was also on editorial staff of one of the city papers, and member of Board of Education with the lamented Dr. Doster. In the great epidemic of 1867, he fell a victim to yellow fever, passing from earthly life to the heavenly on October 19, at the plantation home, Prairie Farm, thirty-two miles from New Orleans, in the parish of La Fourche. His last words, "God will save his own." His only children, Frederick Cox and Walter Leland, died before their father. Their mother, now Mrs. Lizzie Rogers, lives in New Orleans.

CAROLINE^o GALLUP (Albert^s, Nathaniel^r, Samuel^o, Nathaniel^s, Nathaniel^l, John^s, John², John¹), daughter of Albert and Eunice (Smith) Gallup, born at Berne, Albany Co., N. Y., August 5, 1821, and was married to Rev. Sylvanus Reed, a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, at St. Paul's Church, Albany, N. Y., May 14, 1851, by the Rev. William Ingraham Kip, D.D., assisted by the Rev. Horatio Potter, D.D. Rev. Sylvanus Reed was born at Brownsville, N. Y., July 13, 1812; died October 10, 1870, in New York city.

Mrs. Reed's education really began at home, under her own parents. She first attended St. Peter's Church school at Albany, afterwards that of the Misses Carter, to whose school were transferred many other pupils from St. Peter's Church school. In 1835 she entered the Albany Female Academy. It was there that the discipline of mind and taste for knowledge began. The staff of teachers was composed of men and women of talent and learning, among whom were Rev. Robert McGee, Hon. Stephen J. Field, now Justice of the United States Supreme Court, Miss Ann Charlotte Lynch, now Mrs. Botta, who has since been an authority in many places of learning throughout the country. Under the leading of these eminent teachers, combined with her own enthusiasm in the pursuit of knowledge, it was no wonder that Mrs. Reed was graduated with high honors in 1839. During the years following, while mingling in the highest literary circles of society for which Albany was at that time noted, she completed a course of reading covering that usually pursued by students of divinity, and also contributed poems and other articles to various magazines. After her marriage in 1851 to Rev. Sylvanus Reed, she lived for several years at Berne, where her time was occupied by the parochial duties incident to a clergyman's wife and those of a mother and head of a home. In 1862 Mr. and Mrs. Reed removed to the city of New York. She had long had in mind the idea of founding a school for the education of young ladies, and in 1864 the school, which has so long borne her name, was begun. Mrs. Reed had rare gifts for such an enterprise, possessing a mind richly stored with knowledge, and having the power of imparting something of her own fervor in its pursuit to her pupils, whether in the realms of scientific research or of logical thought. She had great executive ability and skill in organization, so that her school soon became an assured success, and has long enjoyed an enviable reputation as a school of a very high order. After twenty-five years of active life at the head of this school, Mrs. Reed resigned the supervision of it in 1890, and spent two years in foreign travel, returning in 1892 to her home in New York.

ELIZABETH J^o. GALLUP (John⁸, Benadam⁷, Benadam⁶, Benadam⁵, Benadam⁴, Benadam³, John², John¹), daughter of John and Roxana (Fish) Gallup; born at Groton, Conn., July 15, 1841; married Captain John P. Wilbur, August 18, 1863. He was a man of so much prominence as a sea captain as to be entitled to a record here. Captain Wilbur was born at Noank (in Groton), Conn., December 10, 1835, and went to sea from there when about 10 years of age; at first in fishing vessels, winning his way to first mate at an early age.

In 1861 the alarm of war found him in Winsted, Conn. At Lincoln's first call he enlisted in Rifle Company D., Captain S. T. Cooke, in Colonel Terry's Regiment. After his return from the war Captain Wilbur again went to sea in command of the William Mallory, Jr.; and here he became deeply interested in a young passenger, George H. Osborne, who afterwards proved to be the sixth earl of Aberdeen, who had left his ancestral estates determined to work his way from the fore-castle to the command of a ship, and then return home to take his place as a peer of the British realm. The father had been prime minister of England, and the son, possessing extraordinary talent, was rapidly approaching his desired position, when, upon his last voyage as first mate, he was lost overboard on his way to Melbourne. Captain Wilbur furnished the first clew his family had of his unfortunate death. For this and his fatherly kindness to the wandering earl, their gratitude was expressed by inviting him to their home (during one of his later voyages) and pressing upon him all the honors of their princely house. This was a remarkable episode in Captain Wilbur's life, and brought his name before the public, and the Aberdeen family have embodied a rare tribute of gratitude in their published life of the Sixth Earl.

Captain Wilbur next sailed in the Thomas Dana, and later in the Farragut, in which he made a voyage around the world via San Francisco and Manila. During the later part of this voyage, the public rejoiced in published accounts of a remarkable work of grace on ship-board. It was his custom to have religious services twice every Sunday, and two evenings during the week, which he conducted personally, assisted in the evening services by all his christian sailors.

On his last voyage Captain Wilbur left New York, December 6, 1877, arriving at Madras, March 22, and at Calcutta, April 10, where he died of Asiatic cholera, May 11, aged 42.

OTHER FAMILIES OF GALLUPS.

A branch of the Gallup family has been found in the northern part of Vermont, who have not as yet been able to trace their ancestry back to the original stock. It is however probable, that they are descendants of the family from Groton, Conn. There is a tradition that William and Oliver Gallup, sons of Joseph and Eunice (Williams) Gallup, in the Fourth Generation, removed to Vermont before the Revolutionary War. The Joseph Gallup mentioned below is probably descended from one of these brothers.

JOSEPH GALLUP, born in 1772. The first record of him is at Pownal, Vt., where he married Polly Bennett, a daughter of Elder Bennett. He then went to Cambridge, in the northern part of Vermont, where he bought thirty acres of woodland, cleared up a portion of the land, built a log house, and went back to Pownal for his wife. They started for Cambridge on horseback, there being but few roads at that time in that part of the state, and a portion of the way only bridle paths and marked trees. There they raised a family of eleven children. At his death they owned 500 acres of land, well stocked and with good buildings. He died June 2, 1854, aged 82; his wife died June 27, 1864, aged 84.

A family of Gallups have been found in western New York, near Syracuse, who came from Somersetshire, England, at a later period, and are not the descendants of John Gallup, the pioneer, but are probably of the same family.

Burke's "History of the Landed Gentry," mentions Thomas Gollop, Esq., of Candlemarsh, ancestor of the Gollop's of that place, and of Strete, County Somerset.

The first of this family of whom there is a record, George Gallup, born in Ubley, Somersetshire, England, in 1833, and died at Marcellus, N. Y., 1882. His father was born in Somersetshire about 1788, and was married to Betsy Parker about 1810. George Gallup came to this country, and married Mary Clements in 1856, who died 1884. They lived at Marcellus, N. Y., where their children were all born.

APPENDIX.

FIRST NAVAL ACTION FOUGHT IN THIS COUNTRY.

Deposition of John Gallup, Jr., to Governor Winthrop. The Colony was much disturbed by Indians, and they were unable to determine to what tribe they belonged; this deposition determined the tribe and was the inauguration of the famous Pequot War of 1637.

“And most fully by old John Gallup, whose eldest son, John Gallup (who since was one of the Connecticut Captains and slain at the fight at Narraganset Fort, December 19, 1675), informed me of that matter as followeth:

That his father with himself and another of his brethren (probably Nat.), a lusty young man also, and a strong, stout fellow, who was his father’s servant, sayelinge to-wards Block Island, to trade thereabouts, not knowing of any mischief done by those Indians.

As they drew neere to the Island they espied a vessel making off from the shore, but by they’r contrary handling of they’r sails, they supposed that they were Indians, which had taken some English vessel and made towards them, and then perceiving it to be so, shot at them three or four vollies, as they sometimes came neare the villains, and then cleared off again to make ready, and so after a third or fourth charge upon the Indians, all those Indians got into the hold, but old John Gallop coming with his vessell close by the other side, espied a skein* hang down, and resolved to hale downe that, and take it with them to catch Basse withal and then perceived a dead body under it, with the head cut off; he got up into the vessel, bidding his two sons follow him, and stand by him with their guns ready charged, which they did; and he taking the bloody head and washing it, knew it to be Mr. Oldham’s, and said:

“Ah! Brother Oldham, is it thee? I am resolved to avenge thy blood;” and taking his dagger to the scuttle hole in which the Indians were guoyd, as thick as they could stud, head by head, and he jobd his dagger very often with all his strength upon them, and then lasht that vessel to his vessel, hoping to tow them along with them. Upon which one Indian first got out and beg'd quarter for his life, and he would tell how many were in the hold, and who they were, and what they had done; they granted him that quarter, and took and bound him, and put him down into they'r hold; presently after, another, a very proper fellow, got out and got to them, and desired like quarter for himself; but they considering if they spared and bound him also, in they'r hold, they might in the night unbind each other and do them mischief, being but four persons, and much tyred, whereupon, without further debate, they chopt off his head, and heaved his carcass overboard; upon which the other Indian confessed to them that He was they'r sachem whom they had killed, and that it was he who stirred the Block Islanders to take that English vessel and cramb* the men in it. Now the wind waxing higher and contrary, they could not tow the other vessel any farther, cut they'r rope and let her drive, and hasted to Saybrook fort with the captive Indian to give them full information what sort of Indians they were who murdered the English; whereupon that just war was commenced against the bloody Pequots and they'r associates."

T. Cobbett's narrative of the deliverance of the Colony's from Indians.
New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Vol. vii, p. 211.

From Drake's History of Boston, page 198.

"Captain John Gallop, an intrepid mariner of Boston, Mass., being upon a trading expedition, put into Block Island to traffic with the natives. He had with him his son John, and another son not mentioned by name, and a servant, who is described as a strong, stout fellow. As they approached the Island they discovered a vessel making off from the shore under suspicious circumstances, for those on board of it managed the sail in an awkward manner. Immediately after they saw that it was full of Indians. Though his men numbered but four, including himself, Captain Gallop determined to capture the piratical vessel as he now conceived her to be such. He therefore fired upon her as soon as he was near enough, and then stood off to ascertain what effect his fire had upon the pirates; for owing to their numbers he was afraid to board them at once as they stood ready armed with guns, pikes and swords. To attempt their capture under these circumstances was certainly desperate; but Gallop had the advantage of being able to manœuvre his vessel, while his enenies were such sorry sailors that they appear to have had little or no control over their craft. Gallop therefore having drawn off to a fair distance made all sail with the prow of his vessel aimed directly against the quarter of the enemy. There being a good breeze he struck her with such force that she was almost overset by the collision, and this so frightened the Indians that six of them jumped into the sea and were drowned. Yet the English Captain did not care to board her but stood off to prepare for another broadside of the same kind. His success increased. The next time he drove the fluke of his anchor through the bows of the pirate and remained fastened to her. In the meantime he raked her fore and aft with his small shot till every Indian had hid himself below. The Englishman might now have boarded her, but the Captain concluded to continue his successful broadsides as his anchor had broken its hold and he was drifting away from his antagonist. As soon as the Indians saw him hauling off, four or five more of them leaped overboard and were drowned. Seeing this Gallup came alongside and boarded them. The Indians by this time, if not before, being satisfied that all was lost, one came out of the hold and surrendered, and being bound was put into the hold. Then another came up and he was bound likewise; but not daring to put him into the hold with the other, fearing one might unloose the other, they threw him bound into the sea. There were two still left in the hold, and these defended themselves so bravely with swords that Gallup resolved to secure them there and to sail away with his prize. He therefore made her fast to his own vessel and proceeded on with her in tow, but in the night the wind came on to blow and he was forced to cut her adrift, and thus he lost her. He soon after arrived at Saybrook with the Indian captive and in due time returned with him to Boston. When Captain Gallup got possession of the enemy's vessel he found the body of Captain Oldham yet warm, and though the head was dissevered and disfigured he knew him well, and exclaimed: "Oh brother Oldham, is it thee? I am resolved to avenge thy death." Thus being sure that he had engaged the murderers of his friend his naturally strong arm was doubly nerved by the justice of his cause.

 parties were at issue, on a plea Not Guilty, and in the tryall of the case the parties gave in their evidences of their title, viz., the petitioners gave in a grant of this assembly of one hundred acres to said John Gallup, deceased, dated October the 12th, 1671, and also a grant of two hundred acres granted to said Hannah Gallup, deceased, dated October the 10th, 1678, and a survey of three hundred acres dated January the 9th, 1707-8, said to be layed out by John Prentiss, county surveyor, to the heirs of John and Hannah Gallup, deceased, by virtue of a grant made by the Generall Assembly to Capt. John Gallup and Mrs. Hannah Gallup and heirs, recorded May the 16th, 1716, and also they gave in the tryall of said case for the ascertaining their bounds, the doings of Mr. Jabez Huntington, Mr. Jonathan Huntington and Stephen Strong, dated August the 17th, 1730, in which they had erected bounds that did preclude the land demanded to all, which witness your petitioner's attorney took his exceptions against their being given to the jury as evidences in said case. 1st to the grants, that they did not agree with said survey in that the said survey is said to be made by virtue of a grant, and the said grants were not only two but of different dates, &c. 2dly, against the survey itself, that it was not made by the persons authorized, appointed by this assembly for that purpose, &c., when the assembly had ordered at their session in October the 13th, 1698, Mr. Nehemiah Palmer and Ensign Ephraim Minor to do the same. 3dly, against the said doings of the freeholders; first, because the same doth not comport with the law, it not being the bounds of any adjoining proprietors, but only the bounds of a survey that could not be found where nor how; 2dly, for that the bounds of the said survey and the bounds erected by said freeholders are directly contradictory. Yet the court ruled they should all be given to the jury, &c.

And your petitioner gave in evidence of his title a grant of this assembly, October the 8th, 1713, of three hundred acres to the Rever'nd Joseph Coitt of Plainfield, and a survey thereof by Mr. John Plumb, County Surveyor, who was authorized and appointed by this assembly for that purpose, dated March 24th, 1713-4; and the said survey, dated the said 24th day of March in the year 1713-4, as aforesaid, was recorded May the 16th, 1714, and also a patten from this assembly for confirmation of the same, dated May the 29th, 1716, and recorded, and also the mean conveyances thereof down to your petitioners, all of which was given to the jury, but the said survey made by the said Mr. John Plumb, dated March the 24th, 1713-4, as aforesaid, was someways mixed with the papers so that the jury never saw the same in the consideration of said case, neither could they have any regard thereto, so that your petitioner wholly lost the benefit of the tryall, whereupon your petitioner humbly saith that the court by law ought not to have suffered said writings produced by the petitioners to be given to the jury as evidence in said case; 2dly, the jury never tryed said case as by law they ought to have done in that they never considered the evidence given them in the case as severall of them have since declared in writing under their hands.

Whereupon your petitioner humbly prays the Hon'ble Assembly would sett aside the former judgment in said case, with all the proceedings thereon, and grant to your petitioner the liberty of one tryall more of said case at the Superior Court, to be at Windham in September next, and that those aforesaid writings, viz., the two grants, one to John Gallop and the other to Hannah Gallop, deceased, and the survey made by John Prentiss and the doings of said freeholders may not be given in evidence to the jury in the tryall, for the reasons aforesaid, in that they tend only to confuse the tryall and amuse the jury and are not any evidence which the law owns, &c., and that the whole cost may follow the final judgment in said case, &c., and your petitioner as in duty bound, &c.

Edmand Read of Wickford, born 1563; married Elizabeth Cook; died 1623.

They had seven children born from 1595 to 1614, of whom Margaret, born probably about 1600, married John Lake. Her sister Martha married first Daniel Epps. She married second Deputy Governor Samuel Symonds; died 1662, in Ipswich, Mass. Her youngest sister, Elizabeth, baptized in Wickford, November 17, 1614; married John Winthrop, Jr., the founder of Ipswich, Mass., and first Governor of Connecticut; she died in 1672. Two of the brothers named Edmand died young.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Cook) Read married for her second husband the celebrated Hugh Peters, who came to this country with Mrs. Lake and Mrs. Winthrop in the ship Abigail.

Thomas Read, who is mentioned in the will of Edmand, came to New England and was a Sheriff and Captain at Salem, Mass. He returned to England and entered Cromwell's army, as did also Mr. Peters. He is favorably mentioned in "Pepy's Diary" as identified prominently with General Monk in the restoration of Charles II. Hugh Peters was convicted of treason and executed at Charing Cross, in London, October 16, 1660.

LETTER OF

MRS. MARGARET LAKE TO JOHN WINTHROP, JR.

For her ever honored Brother, John Winthrop, Esq., London, in old England.

Honored Brother: The news that you had taken so long a voyage, and such a way as that wee were deprived of that happiness as to have a sight of yor selfe (whom to see would have been, and I hope ever shall bee, exceeding cheering and comforting unto us) was exceeding grievous to mee. I am much refreshed to heare that God as safely carried you over the seas. I desire that God would ever prosper you in your vocasions therein, and returne you safely to us againe.

Might I not bee troublesome to you, I would have disired yor's to have done mee yt courtesy as to have inquired concerning my husband's death, and how hee ended his dayes, as also to have inquired of my cousin, Thomas Cooke, whether hee knew whether their was anything left mee or no. Something I left in his father's hands, but I know not whether my husband had it or no. I would have intreated you, if you heare of anything comeing to me yt you would bring it for mee, if it may bee; as also I would desire you to inquire whether my sister Breadcale, who dwells in Lee, in Essex, bee living. You may heare of her if living at Irongate, where boats weekly come from Lee.

I heare my son and daughter Gallup have write to you about that money which is due to you by my father's will. I would intreat you to bee as healpful as you can in it.

X It is betwikt 30 and 40 yeares since my father dyed. If you have occasion to search ye records, that may bee of some direction to you. Not, further, but my due respects to yors with you; desiring the Lord to returne you safe to us in his owne due time, I remaine,

Your most affectionate Sister,

MARGERETTE LAKE.

(Winthrop Papers.)

18 (11mo.) 1661.

The above seems to indicate that Margaret
that he died after she left him, or she wrote particulars of his death.
